

FIGHTING ON THE BORDER

Mexican Federalists About Whipped by Constitutionalists.

Presidio, Texas, January 1.—The northern division of the Mexican federal army at Ojinaga, Mexico, with its eleven generals, other officers and about 4,000 soldiers, after a merciless three days' attack by General Ortega's 6,000 rebels, tonight appeared ready to flee in disorder across the river into the United States.

With a line, struggling and wounded at the border to indicate the extent of the carnage, and deserters already appearing in numbers, Major M. McNamee, commanding the border patrol, made every plan in anticipation of the flight.

Less than 500 cavalrymen, mostly from the Fifteenth cavalry, form the border patrol here. To this small body of American soldiers would fall the task of surrounding and disarming perhaps 4,000 foreign soldiers, 900 of them if 1,000 have been disabled or killed. The ability of the American soldiers to handle the rebels was based on the assumption that the rebels would pursue the federalists merely to the river.

An estimate, as carefully as could be made, of the wounded on both sides was 1,000. Most of the wounded were left on the battlefield. The less disabled were rescued and the rest were cared for by the Red Cross on this side. Scores of unharmed federal deserters, in defiance of the border patrol, crossed the river. All were disarmed and forced back to the Mexican side. More than 200 rifles, other arms and ammunition were taken.

It was impossible to learn accurately the number of dead. Many were believed to have died of their wounds. Medical attention was lacking. Red Cross officials were not permitted to ford the river, even under the Red Cross flag. Those who were permitted to help the wounded from the river risked the danger of being shot. A few shots fell close to or on the American side north of Presidio, but no one on this side was injured. Major McNamee sent General Ortega word that any further firing across the river might entail grave consequences.

So far Major McNamee has adhered to a policy of sending back all the federalists who crossed the river. He has been disarmed, but they might be permitted to remain on grounds of humanity.

As for the battle of Ojinaga, one mile back from the river, it proceeded uninterrupted, with the federalists confined in and fighting from the adobe huts in the village, while the rebels were drawing cannon, firing artillery and small guns from the hills and approaches.

Soon after daylight the federalists made a desperate attempt to rally. They even extended their line of fire outward, but this was broken by the firing of the rebels that sent the defenders back to their inner defenses. Thereafter the relative position of the opposing forces remained much the same with General Ortega driving in shot and shell from three sides while General Francisco Castro's federalists fought from what vantage points they had within the horse corral, the customs house and trenches.

Never in border fighting had there been a scene equal to the federal wounded and deserters who scrambled to reach the United States, while the rebels rear there still under a pouring shower of shells and bullets.

The river's edge was a ragged fringe of smoke-begrimed adobe, some rushing pell mell into the river, some crying from the pain of their wounds, others kneeling, begging, scattered limbs, over rocks and cactus, some greedily stopping to drink the muddy water and all begging the Americans on the opposite side for shelter from the turmoil from which they had fled.

The river bed is soft mud with water in the middle about waist deep. At one point 200 federalists, all carrying arms, waded across. They were surrounded by a handful of federalists, troops disarmed and forced back. The wounded were picked up as soon as they reached this shore.

A TRIED AND PROVED GUARANTEE.

Man Bought a Bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic, Then Took It Back and Asked for His Money and Got It.

A man recently tried out the guarantee which the York Drug Store gives with every bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic. He bought a bottle and then went back to the drug store and said the medicine hadn't helped him.

This druggist just reached into his cash register and took out a half dollar, the price of the bottle of Liver Tonic, and handed it back to the gentleman. But he didn't take the money. He owned up that he was just trying the guarantee and, as a matter of fact, he had found Dodson's Liver Tonic the best remedy for his condition and biliousness he had ever tried. "Why," he said, "my wife wouldn't be without a bottle in the house for anything. It's the best thing in the world for the whole family, and the medicine that I prefer to take or give to my children for a lazy liver."

The York Drug Store sells Dodson's Liver Tonic and guarantees it to start the liver without violence. It is taking the place of calomel everywhere. If you buy a bottle and don't find this pleasant-tasting vegetable liquid does better than a lazy liver, he will hand your money back with a smile.
